countries]. Psychiatrists play a pivotal role in providing for the physical and psychological needs of their patients in psychiatric hospitals. Patient care requires a broad knowledge of the available guidelines, national regulations, hospital policies, and technical regulations. The psychiatrist needs to be aware of all other doctors in the ward and of his/her own behaviour. These demands can be met by the use of ad hoc standard operating procedures. The nature of psychiatric practice poses the risk of developing acute neuropsychiatric disorders and it is therefore of the utmost importance to guarantee good monitoring and close follow-up of psychiatrists. The aim of this study is to evaluate the current status of monitoring systems for psychiatrists in the German-speaking countries. The present study is based on secondary data from a position paper by a German psychiatric association and the Heidelberg Declaration. A questionnaire was sent to members of the two German psychiatric associations (DGP and BPA). A total of 128 psychiatrists participated in this questionnaire. 37% of the responding psychiatrists work in university hospitals. 50% of the psychiatrists work in a hospital with more than 100 beds. About one third of the psychiatrists work in institutions with 800 or less beds. The monitoring systems for psychiatrists vary considerably. 21% of the psychiatrists have adopted an individual assessment and treatment plan (AATP), 15% have a team assignment, 13% have an electronic patient file, and 5% use a computerised note-taking system. The frequency of rating scales used by psychiatrists varies. The most used rating scales are the Scale for Assessment of Negative Symptoms and the Positive and Negative Symptom Scale. The rating scales used vary considerably among hospitals. The hospitals were classified into three groups. The first one contains the best rated hospitals. The second one contains all the other hospitals. Both groups of hospitals use different evaluation and monitoring criteria, e.g. the number of beds and the number of working shifts. In addition to the different types of institutions

In a candid interview with Breitbart News Daily SiriusXM host Alex Marlow over the weekend, RNC Chairman Reince Priebus accused former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and her campaign of being in “a fog about the presidential race” and needing to apologize to Republicans for their “9/11 moment” in last week’s New Hampshire primary, adding that he believes the GOP nominee will emerge as “a better candidate.” “The one thing I do think is Hillary Clinton and her campaign are very... they need to apologize," Priebus said in the interview. "I think Hillary Clinton has been the victim of a 9/11 moment. She was mocked and she was laughed at by Republicans across America for the way she reacted to the assassination of the Rev. [Martin] Luther King and her failure to offer the same respect and tribute to his legacy to her own African-American supporters." "She was laughed at for the same things in Iowa — the very same things," he continued. "And I think she needs to apologize for these things and the lack of respect. And in a political sense, I think Republicans will be better off as a result of this. Because it also exposes more of the Democrats' political strength on the left where Bill Maher and other Democrats have been critical of Republicans as being racist. It exposes more of the weakness for that among a large percentage of the Democrat party. So I think it's a win for the Republican Party." Despite his past criticisms of former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, Priebus praised him on the radio show, saying that they "have a great relationship" and believe in "the same conservative principles." "I think in terms of the next four years, the stakes are enormous," Priebus said. "We are fighting for the survival of our country, for the security of our border, for the enforcement of our laws, for freedom of speech and the First Amendment and opposition to sharia law. These are all things that Jeb Bush understands. He's a true conservative on these issues. We believe in the same things. We also share a mutual respect for each other, and I think you're going to see a lot of great things from
